Retina Dance Company Information

Retina Dance Company, under the artistic direction of Filip Van Huffel, have established themselves as innovative and dynamic voices in both the British and European contemporary dance scene. Founded in 1995, Retina has created eighteen company works to date and has toured throughout the UK, Belgium, France, Germany, India, Italy, Portugal, Switzerland and Venezuela.

Retina create and tour contemporary dance works that comment on today's society through close observation of people, their physical quirks, movement and spatial behaviour. Retina's choreography is characterised by physically vibrant movement, compelling energy and ground-breaking partner-work encased in an artistic atmosphere.

Retina's early works Battery, Crave, Pit, and Tweeling attracted a three-year sponsor, ABSA and London Arts funding which enabled them to develop Filip's choreographic style and to identify their strengths. Since 1999, Retina has been supported by both British and Belgian funding organisations. Through their support, they created full-length productions: Hard Shoulder in 1999, Oxygenius in 2000, Toxin in 2001 and X : in 2002. During 2003, Retina created two productions, Freeze, a Dance for the Camera BBC/ACE production with director Lucy Baldwyn and their touring production Me:Mo.

In 2004, Filip broke the 'creation - tour' cycle to give himself some time for experimentation with his choreography and movement vocabulary. It was an invaluable period, allowing Filip to explore his full potential, and to create a new vision for the company. Funding was obtained from Arts Council England, East Midlands to support organisational development and artistic research and to relocate from London. As a result, Retina now has an office base in Nottingham UK and in Antwerp Belgium, and has been able to develop the management, education and marketing aspects of the company. It has been an incredibly exciting period and Retina is enjoying the chance to develop their role as a regional resource for dance as well as their national and international profile, incorporating their touring productions, workshop programmes, professional training and community projects.

In 2005 Retina produced Eleven stories for the body, distance to our soul, a production that used eleven different texts created specifically for the piece, some of which were obtained through a writing competition. The work toured widely with great success.

In 2006 Retina led a professional development project PAGE1 for graduate dancers to gain experience and skills within the dance field in a large-scale project across the East Midlands. The boy who never grows old was produced as a touring work within this project and due to its great success with audiences across the region, Retina kept the work in their repertory for national touring.

In 2007 Retina produced This is not a body, a production that used surrealist art as its inspiration through a collaboration with visual artist Brian Hartley. This work toured throughout 2007 and 08 with an excellent response to the beauty and power of the work and the dancers.

In autumn 2008 Retina produced a 30-minute production Relative Danger, created specifically to be accessible to wide ranging audience groups and was performed alongside a lecture demonstration that opened up the choreographic process to the audience.

Antipode was produced in 2009 for a premiere in Hamburg's DanceKiosk festival in July 2009. A full-length production for an all male company astounded audiences with extreme technique, energy, power and sensitivity set to a beautiful musical score by composer Joris Vanvinckenroye.

Currently La Lutte is in creation for a premiere in Edinburgh Festival in July 2010. This male duet explores the struggle to communicate with self and one another, and is set in a wrestling arena. La Lutte will tour both independently and in a shared bill with Antipode through 2010 and 2011.

Throughout all of their touring productions, Retina continues to develop their participatory programme of activities that encompass one off workshops, week long residencies, collaborations and site specific projects. Retina also has a youth dance company that perform work created by Filip Van Huffel or company members. Retina Youth Dance Company will be performing in the Youth Dance England's U-Dance competition in July 2010, representing the East Midlands.

Retina is concentrating its efforts this year on developing an organisational development application for Arts Council England to enable a full time Managers post from April 2011 as well as supporting an ambitious plan of activity for the future years. The Company Manager will be involved in this process.
